BEAUTIFUL LAKE COCHICHEWICK
Years ago a Famous Resort of the Historic Red Men.

There are few regions in New England which the wild legends and traditions of the fast-vanishing race of red men have not invested with a peculiar charm. The poetic legends of Whittier have made famous the White Hills of New Hampshire, and the lake region of that state as well, but there are many other localities, equally worthy, which are still unsung, and the legends which remain to remind us of aboriginal days are fast vanishing into forgetfulness.

Such a region is that in the immediate neighborhood of Lake Cochichewick, in North Andover, where, hundreds of years ago, the noble race of red men builded their graceful wigwams and lighted their council fires. There they watched the golden maize ripen in the fertile meadows under the influence of the September sun, and pursued the bounding deer through the dense forests. Lake Cochichewick was then, as now, one of the most beautiful sheets of water in all this region, and its waters were as clear and cool as a shower of pearls.

The same conditions exist now. No polluted streams flow into it, but it is fed by springs in the bottom of the lake, which make its waters absolutely pure, and always cold and clear. Its shores are covered with small, smooth pebbles, and upon adjacent hillside forests of oak and evergreen still remain.

At the lower end of the lake three large ice houses have been erected and filled with ice from this clear body of water. Six thousand tons have been housed here by EDWARD ADAMS, who is prepared to furnish ice of absolute purity to his customers. It is vastly different from the ordinary ice sold in New England, and it can be obtained by leaving your order at the store of VALPEY BROTHERS, Andover.

Strictly Pure Ice!

Citizens of Andover desiring a strictly pure article of ice should see that their supply comes from Poms pond. As pure a sheet of water as there is in Massachusetts, surrounded by hill and wood. Fed entirely by springs, there is no chance for impurities, not even locomotive cinders. It is of as much historic interest as her larger sister in connection with the Red Men or the Black, and is not behind in sentimentality, and it is ahead in purity.

I secured two thousand tons of ice from its surface the past winter, and am prepared to furnish persons with it at reasonable rates in quantities to suit. Orders left with REA & ABBOTT will receive prompt attention.

ORIGINAL COMMUNICATIONS.

Impressions of a Visit to John Bull made by Brother Jonathan.

[We have received the following interesting communication from London. As "Jonathan" is a familiar name in the ancient and honorable Leavitt family, which emigrated from Old England at an early date, we will venture a Yankee "guess" that the writer is Rev. Mr. Leavitt of North Andover. —ED.]

Dear Editor of the Townsman:

A long time ago there lived in this land two brothers. The younger of the two, who is well known as Jonathan, concluded to go away to another land and make his fortune. The older brother who was called John, said to Jonathan: "You had better be content and stay here—it is much better." But Jonathan said, "No, I will go," and he went. They had been separated a great many years, not seeing anything of each other, and were growing older (John indeed had come to be quite an old man), when Jonathan concluded to go and visit his brother, and see what he had been doing in all these years of his separation, and what sort of a man he had come to be. Your reader may be interested in Jonathan's account of his visit, and in some of his impressions, as given by himself. I will try as far as possible to use his language.

"My brother John was so much older than I, that I had come to look up to him with almost the reverence due to a father, and my feelings and expectations may easily be imagined, as I approached John's place—the old homestead—on a beautiful island. I knew John rather prided himself on the skill he had in all things relating to boats which he naturally made a special study of, for there is no other way to get on or off his island but by a boat. I looked, therefore, to see something suggestive and impressive as I drew towards his island in my boat. And here I got my first impressions. Instead of finding that John had special facilities for landing, before which I should blush at my own devices, I found that he offered little more than nature did to the Pilgrim Fathers—that is, "make the best of it." I was astonished to be obliged to cast anchor a mile out from shore, and get a small boat to take me in, and even then to have the small boat so clumsy about it, as if it had not been used to having such duty.

What had John been about? A great shipper and yet so primitive! Why, I reckon, if I did my shipping with such facilities—or lack of facilities—I might as well give up shipping altogether. I believe in docks, and taking a vessel right into a dock. I must ask John to come over and see my arrangements and not continue to have things so primitive as he has them.

But I knew John had invented railways and locomotives, and supposed he had spent his time in perfecting them, and neglected his landings. So I looked for something in railways, which would explain all deficiencies in approaches for shipping. I had taken some of John's early ideas of railroads, cars, and engines, and been developing a railway system myself. But John had the start—he was much older; he had the experience and the capital which I had not, and so I looked for something prodigious in this specialty of John's.

And just here I got my second impression, which, I must say, made me dumb for a time. Why, John's railroad fittings are mere child's toys! He has a great, showy building for his station, and covers it all over with great letters, and is very careful who goes into it, and has men stationed here and there and everywhere to see that passengers do things—straight, and has a great sign in one place—"Booking Office"—so that one is impressed that something great is to happen. And then, when you get inside, you find a lot of little boxes on wheels—the most like chicken-coops of anything I can think of—into which they put all the chickens that are "booked," and lock them in, but they get out and run away. A lot of these coops are fastened together and "shunted"—as John calls it—into that station to load the chickens which are to be taken off to John's main residence. How I laughed and laughed, that John should have such contrivances and name them cars—or "coaches" as he likes to call them!

Well, I looked at the engines too. John's strength will be in his engines. But such queer things! One pair of driving wheels about eight feet in diameter and little, small cylinders to drive the wheels. Queer things indeed! "But I suppose they can go," I said to myself. Well, after seeing that my own "luggage" was put into the "van" (for John has no arrangement to look after it for passengers, except that lots of people are round in uniforms ready to serve you—for a sixpence or a shilling), and being properly locked in, I sat back to see what kind of fittings John had in these coaches—for I rode on a first class ticket and I comforted myself I should have a rapid ride on one of John's "mail trains." I was astonished at the fittings of John's coaches—so very plain. I concluded John must be a very plain man and in for the substantial, and he would show me how to take people where they wanted to go with great celerity. I was on a "mail train."

But here I got a third impression which shocked me. That mail train kept stopping, and its stops were long enough for people to write their letters. I did not know what to think. When I asked what this meant, I was told there was a "cattle show" somewhere on the road, and every regular train was crowded aside because of it. You may believe I was dumfounded—a "mail train" giving way to a "cattle show"!

I took another trip on one of John's trains, and this time as first class passenger on an express and was told: "Oh! the expresses are the fast trains here." But some boat race was on, and an excursion train was run in ahead of our train, ours waiting to give it the right of way—and so we were very late. John has not made a great success of railroading in any of its departments, I am forced to admit; and after all my experience I am inclined to think John might learn something from the system I have developed. The trouble is, you can't persuade John that he has anything to learn. John's got a big place over here, but he has some very strange ideas.

Another time I will tell you some more impressions of my visit.
London, July 8, 1889.

Notes from Nicaragua.

We have heard so many expressions of interest in the notes of pioneer life in Nicaragua already printed that we print a few extracts from later letters written home by the same engineer, only premising that they were not intended for publication:

CAMP CARMEN, NICARAGUA.

I am sitting on a cracker-box and writing on a table made by driving four crocheted sticks into the ground, putting poles between them and laying upon them a covering of poles. This we improved one day by putting on an extra covering of pieces of board from cracker boxes, etc., so that now we have a table we are proud of. I received one letter and one TOWNSMAN on Friday, June 21. They came by the Honduras and Central American Line. I have read the TOWNSMAN twice already, the second time reading advertisements and all, and enjoyed it very much. The other engineers read it also. One of them had a New York paper which told about that terrible Johnstown disaster. That and the ANDOVER TOWNSMAN are the only papers I have seen since I left New York, except papers got at Kingston, and all the home news they published was what we brought on our steamer.

We first started actual work June 19. We walked over a very rough trail—in fact about the roughest walking I ever undertook. We went about seven or eight miles on this reconnaissance, and how we all did sweat! I do not think that I ever perspired so freely in my life. All my clothes were as wet when I got home as though I had been in the river, and yet the thermometer was not much higher, if any, than 80°. Two miles an hour is about as fast as any one can walk in this country anywhere.

People who say there no hills in this country know nothing about it. The elevation all along here is only about thirty feet above sea level, and a hundred of these hills and ridges rise 250 to 400 feet high, and are terribly steep. Some of the smaller ridges that rise about fifty feet above the stream—for between every two ridges there is always a stream—are so nearly perpendicular that it is almost impossible to go directly up them so hard to climb is the mud which is often ankle-deep on the hillsides, so if one starts in the morning with clean clothes, the chances are that before night he will slide down hill twenty or thirty feet on his back, and be covered with mud from head to foot.

We have everywhere streams of the most beautiful water I ever drank, pure, soft and sweet, and cold enough. And the beauty of it is that it never hurts one to drink all he wants, no matter how hot he is. Yesterday in running 3,000 feet of line, we crossed fourteen of these creeks. Then, where there is no water, there is no trouble in getting plenty of good drinking water. For there is a vine called bejuco de agua, or water-vine which looks very like a dried up grape vine and is usually about six inches in diameter. It has roots in the top of the tall trees and usually hangs down in a loop. One or two blows with a machete (a short sword) will cut down a piece, and a piece five or six feet long will give about a pint of very good water. Lay it on the ground or hold it horizontally, and no water will run out; but hold it vertically and it will run out freely, and very nice water it is too.

There are plenty of snakes here, and many of them are very poisonous, but during the day time they are very sluggish and would not bite one unless he stepped directly on them, and not then if he stepped quickly. In the night, they are much more dangerous, but no one ever goes outside of camp after dark. They are the only things that are dangerously poisonous. I always shake out my blanket before I go to bed and then tuck my mosquito bar under it so that it keeps out all kinds of bugs and insects. There are plenty of scorpions and centipedes but there is little or no danger of being bitten by them, and if bitten no danger from the effects of the bite. The alligator ants are the most disagreeable thing here, I think. They are from an inch to an inch and a half long, and are in the woods everywhere. They will sting if they get a chance, but one can avoid them by care; the bites are said to be terribly painful for about half a day. As for wild animals, they are more afraid of us than we are of them. The tigers never touch any one unless wounded, the wild hogs seldom attack any one, and they cannot climb a tree.

We are living well for we have plenty of bananas, plantains, yams, and limes, and fresh fish caught within a hundred feet of our camp. Nearly every day we have a wild turkey, mountain hen, guatasa (which is a sort of rabbit) or wild hog, all of which are very nice—particularly the mountain hen which is much like a partridge, only larger. When at work, we get up about 6 o'clock, have coffee, and start for the woods from 7 to 7.30, so that now we take a few minutes for lunch about noon, and stop work from 3.30 to 4 or a little later sometimes, getting back to camp about 5. After we get cooled off a little, we go into the Limpio and take a bath, where the water is clear, about waist deep, and with a rocky bottom. The bath makes one feel like a new man. We get through dinner about 6. By a little after 6 it is too dark to see to read without a light. We have little more than twelve hours of daylight here, chiefly on account of the forest.

The last four days we have run a little over 11,000 feet of compass and level line. This is the reconnaissance line. After finishing this we shall probably run one or more preliminary lines, and from them get information enough to run a location line, which is the line where the railroad is to be built. We keep quite near the canal line, and yet far enough away from it so that it will not be injured by blasting. From this spur tracks are to be run in at required intervals to the canal line, as they begin construction. Over this road will be carried all the material for building the breakwater in the harbor at Greytown. This will come from the big cut in the interior, or rather on the divide. The divide is a ridge about 500 feet above sea level, and about 30 miles from Greytown. From the divide, the land slopes in each direction. It is there that there is a cut on the canal of 425 feet depth, and at the top of about 400 feet in width. Our camp is about three miles west of the divide, and we have about five miles on the west of the divide for our work. The canal runs across the country and does not reach the San Juan River to use it until it reaches Ochoa, where it runs into the river. Ochoa is about 40 miles from the ocean by way of the canal, and about 70 by way of the river.

I had to laugh about the fear of having too much money with me. When I left Greytown for the woods, I had $1.75 in Nicaragua money, which will last me six months up here, for there is no possible way of spending it. You see we don't have anything here, and a mail is something looked forward to for weeks to come.

Notes from Hampton Beach.

Andover on the Shawsheen and Hampton on the shore of the Atlantic sea are thirty-eight miles apart—not as the crow flies, but as the respective and respected conductors on the Western and Eastern Divisions of the consolidated Boston & Maine Railroad tear out the mileage coupons. The transfers from one train to another are not made at every station on the line, but at South Lawrence, North Andover, Haverhill, Bradford, Georgetown, and Newburyport. By skillful arrangements of the railroad officials, the passengers on any given train are not obliged to change at more than two-thirds or five-sixths of the above-named places. There is one more change however at Hampton Depot—to the coaches or carriages in waiting to convey travellers to the beach. A delicate compliment was paid the ANDOVER TOWNSMAN in assigning the "literary editor" as driver of one wagon-full of Andover tourists. We believe the trust was not dishonored, for we passed all teams—which were going the other way or lying at anchor. We noticed the inscription on three guide-boards at different stages of the route—leaving it ambiguous whether the signs were intended to emphasize the idea of "2 M." or to indicate 3 times 2 as the real distance. The fact is, however, that the round trip from the station to the beach and back is just 3 times 2, so that the guide-boards tell the truth.

HAMPTON BEACH 2 M.

There are two Hampton Beaches, separated by the prominent promontory called Boar's Head. The one to the southward is very naturally and properly called South Beach, while the other is with similarly remarkable appropriateness named North Beach, and stretches away to Little Boar's Head. The view from Boar's Head is grand, extending southward beyond Plum Island to Cape Ann, eastward to the historic and beautiful Isles of Shoals, and northwardly to the coast of Maine and old Agamenticus. At night the revolving light of White Island (at the "Shoals") shines out at regular intervals, with other lights north and south. The bathing is convenient and good. About 11 o'clock and 4 o'clock scores of people on both beaches are swimming, jumping, and floundering around generally in the white-tipped rollers. Most of the cottages are near enough to enable the bathers to put on their suits at home, while the hotels have bathing-houses for their guests on the beach.

The Boar's Head House is most "high-toned," having the highest elevation and the highest prices. Leavitt's Hampton Beach House commands the entrance of the South Beach, and Nudd's Eagle Hotel is nearer the north. Our party are guests at the last named house, and are bound to "give our ship a good name." The prices are moderate, and accommodations good. When walking on the beaches and bathing in the ocean fail, there is a little schooner in the offing commanded by Capt. Nudd ("anudde Nudd," some of the younger members of the party distinguish him) all ready for fishing-trips out in the bay. This pleasure is still in store for us, so that we cannot now state who is "high lones" in fishing or who lies low at Neptune's nod.

The marked thing about Hampton is the liking of Andover people for it. It commenced long ago. Dr. Jonathan French, son of the second pastor of our Old South, was for fifty years the minister of the North Hampton church. According to our Auld lang-syne records of this week (or last week or next week), an Andover Lovejoy went to Hampton for a wife in the beginning of the last century. We are not certain that we have a full list of Andover sojourners, but every day we see some new representatives. Rev. J. J. Blair and family are at DeLancey's quiet and shady house up town, with James De Lancey to drive them to the Beach every morning. The Misses Ellis and Amy Stork are there also. At Mrs. S. F. Abbott's cottage on the North Beach, have been or are: Mrs. Abbott and her daughters, Mrs. Perkins and Mrs. Babbitt; Mrs. N. M. Berry and Miss Dora Berry and the De Wints; Mrs. J. H. Merrill, Miss Lucia G. Merrill, and Mrs. Geo. C. Merrill and family. In one of the largest and finest cottages on the South Beach are domiciled Mr. Henry A. Bodwell and party—eleven in all. Last—but oh! not least—is our party at the Eagle, which including Prof. Graves and family, and Misses Mabel Strong and Paradise, and Miss Emily F. Carleton of North Andover, makes up a baker's dozen, nor does this count banjos, bicycles, and base-balls. Besides these, we have seen young Frye and Charnley, who called from Little Boar's Head, Judge Morton's summer home.

We have just heard of somebody here older than the oldest Andover person mentioned above. He did not come from Andover. He came from Iceland. He came about A. D. 1000. His name was Thorvald. That is, he came somewhere, and was killed by the Indians (in 1004), and was buried, asking that crosses be set at his head and his feet. The ancient description of the places visited would be fulfilled here. Now (on the land of Mr. Lee of the well-known publishing house of Lee & Shepard, Boston), near the North shore, there has been seen a boulder containing strange marks, which might have been intended as crosses, and possibly as ancient figures to indicate the date or the distance of the grave from the boulder. Mr. Andrew K. Ober, a Beverly antiquarian, in search of traces of those Norwegian explorers, examined this rock and believes it to be the site of Thorvald's grave. He has erected a sign to that effect near it on the road, and had the rock covered up to prevent its being taken away by visitors, first having an excellent photograph of it taken. If any of our readers are versed in ancient Norwegian or Icelandic, they should send, to Brown & Co., the local photographers here, for a picture of the "sculptured rock," and study it out under a microscope.
C. C. C.

If there are any young folks who cannot go travelling in reality at this vacation season, they can do so in imagination by reading the August Wide Awake, for almost every article carries one to some distant or remarkable place of the past or present. Witness these titles: Gul Baba, Father of Roses (Constantinople); How Long Pond ran away (Vermont); In the Meadows at Trianon (the Swards in Paris when M. Thiers was elected President); Queen Mary's Child-garden (in the Scotch Highlands); Fishing in Tweed and Yarrow (Scotland); Camping near the Giant Trees (California) by Jessie Benton Frémont; The Great Mogul (diamond); About Row-boats; The Ringing Rocks (in Delaware or Jersey or down there somewhere). Appropriate to the season is a charming poem, entitled Sweet Home by Harriet Prescott Spofford, the subject being John Howard Payne, who "Homeless himself, heard one singing 'Sweet Home'!"

A memorable ceremony will take place at Charlestown, S. C., to-day, when the Robert Anderson post, the first post of the G. A. R. in South Carolina, will be mustered in within the walls of Fort Sumter. There was a post of the G. A. R. in this city in 1870, but it was composed mostly of colored men and politicians. The present post is composed of Union soldiers who have settled there since the war, all white, and none of the then politicians. It is named after the gallant Anderson, who defended the fort against the state troops in 1861, and a roll of about 30 members.

It used to be a famous question of the Romanists to Protestants: "Where was your religion to be found before Luther?" It was never, perhaps, better answered than by Sir Henry Wotton: "My religion was to be found then where yours is not to be found now—in the written word of God."

A huge stone weighing over a ton which was being hoisted to the fifth story of a new building on Tremont Street, Boston, Tuesday, fell to the ground, the guy rope of the derrick breaking. Four men in the fifth story, who were guiding the upward progress of the stone, fell to the ground, two being killed and the others fatally injured. A horse-car heavily loaded with passengers had just passed along, and escaped only by a few feet from being crushed to atoms.

About 5000 people gathered on the Green at New Haven, Friday, to witness the tearing down of the six lofty pillars and portico of the old state house. The preparations occupied several hours and it was late in the afternoon before the work was accomplished.

The pillars were undermined and chains were attached to the tops and led off to capstans 100 yards distant. The fall was an impressive sight. The whole of the building will be down in two months.

All the arrangements for the reception and entertainment of President Harrison in Boston were successfully carried out Wednesday. The day was bright and pleasant, but the President saw Boston under the best possible circumstances. The scene at and about the Vendome at night was brilliant in the extreme. He resumed his trip yesterday morning over the Western Division of the Boston & Maine, making stops at Lawrence, Haverhill, Exeter, Salmon Falls, North Berwick and Portland, everywhere being seen by large crowds.

Washington Territory has again been visited by a terrible conflagration, destroying property to the estimated loss of $14,000,000. This time it is Spokane Falls, one of the most prominent of the many new cities in the infant state, having about 20,000 inhabitants. Situated on the line of the Northern Pacific Railroad, close to the Cour d'Alene mining region, the city has been the site for many large industrial establishments, such as smelters and kindred enterprises. Expensive public edifices had also been recently erected, and the population was easily supporting two prosperous daily papers. There was very little insurance, but the people seem very cheerful, and will begin to rebuild at once. Two persons are said to have been killed by leaping from windows in the hotels.

The White Mountain Express on the Boston and Maine, which left Boston at 9.30 Saturday morning was wrecked near North Conway, N. H., in the afternoon. The escape from death was almost miraculous. The express was two hours late, owing to an accident to the locomotive, and was running forty miles an hour to make up time, when the engineer discovered a gravel train, on the track. He slowed up as much as possible, and with his fireman jumped to save their lives. The force of the collision telescoped the baggage car and one Pullman, and the others were thrown across the tracks. The smoking car, and three passenger cars kept the rail. Not more than two persons were seriously injured, and none fatally.

Glen Mills Breadstuffs.

Among their specialties are

GOLDEN CORN MEAL,

made from the very best pure yellow corn, thoroughly cleaned, ground and bolted by a process peculiar to this mill. It contains all other boiled meals in the market in sweetness and flavor.

ENTIRE WHEAT FLOUR

is made from selected, choice, ripe wheat, the grain first having been thoroughly cleaned, scoured and brushed, the woody fibre discarded, the inner brand retained, and the whole reduced to a uniform fineness by a process peculiar to our own mills. Every effort of the mind or movement of the muscle involves the waste of nervous energy and vitality; we must build up our systems by those elements which will replace those wastes. Chemical analysis shows us that waste flour cannot do this, as the best part of the wheat is sacrificed for the sake of the color.

GLEN MILLS ENTIRE WHEAT FLOUR contains all the elements of the wheat, stored there by our Creator for our use.

Those preferring a coarse Graham should use the

Glen Mills True Wheat Meal the best wheat meal in the market.

GLEN MILLS NEW PROCESS RYE MEAL, is made from the best quality of White Rye, which before it comes from the mill is thoroughly cleaned from all impurities, so that nothing comes to the reducing mills but plump, sound rye, as clean as washing can make it. One five pound package of our rye meal will convince you of its merits.

WHITE CORN MEAL,

CRACKED WHEAT,
YELLOW HOMINY,
RYE WHEAT,
GRANULATED WHEAT.
are among our other goods.

See that the name GLEN MILLS is on every package. For sale in five pound packages, barrels and half-barrels.

Cook and Landress wanted.Some time ago we called attention to the disgraceful conduct of some of the attendants at the band concerts. Again there comes to us the report of actions which show that a simple rebuke is not sufficient to control the hoodlum element which runs wild at all public entertainments. At the last concert the fence about the grounds of Peter D. Smith, Esq., was cut and marred in such a way as to make it necessary for Mr. Smith to notify the police to see that his property is not molested hereafter. This is the only way to treat such cases and we look to the police to do their part in abating what is fast becoming a nuisance to our better citizens, who enjoy going to a band concert to listen to the music.The damage done at the depot last Saturday morning by an overcharge in blasting rocks, brings to mind again the feeling that too much care cannot be exercised in the use of powder and dynamite. It was only a piece of chance that some person was not seriously injured in the above case, and as the man in charge was said to have had considerable experience in blasting, it would certainly appear like a case of gross carelessness in using an over-charge in such close proximity to any building, and especially to as public a place as the above.

watchman, was accepted. George Mears, who has been a member of the police force, for some time past and is well and favorably known. That the duties of this position will be well performed by him, we have no doubt.The Band concert last Friday evening, as usual drew out a large number of people, who enjoyed the excellent programme which was given.Miss S. E. Jackson's house on Woburn St. which is to be occupied by Lieut. Wadhams, is up and the roof is being raised. This house when completed with its broad piazzas, will command a fine view and together with the other new houses on this street, will make a handsome improvement in this part of the town, for which much credit is due C. B. Mason the builder.The many friends of Dr. Bancroft are more than pleased to welcome him back once more to his home. He came by the steamer Pavonia, and arrived in Andover Tuesday forenoon. Doctor is looking exceedingly well, his health having been good during his absence, and his journey one of pleasure and profit.

Public School Matters.

At the meeting of the School Committee, Monday afternoon, it was voted to engage H. A. Halstead of Vailsbury, N. J., to become principal of the Grammar School at a salary of $900. In Mr. Halstead, the Committee think that a suitable man has been selected. He is 35 years old, and was a student at Dartmouth College. He has had an experience of ten years as principal of all grades from primary to high, but principally of the grammar grade. His recommendations are high, and it is thought the best interests of the school have been cared for in the selection.The Committee as far as possible will make an established grade in all the schools.
A fourth year has been added to the Grammar school, making a four years course although it is thought that this will not be required by some in order to enter Punchard.
The stone-wall on the lower side and the fence in front of the new Grammar school will be removed, and the grounds graded.During the vacation a large number of panes of glass in the windows in the old Grammar building have been maliciously broken, and the authorities have been notified, who will keep a sharp lookout for the offenders.The primary school at Abbott Village will receive a new coat of paint.Miss Emma E. Gould, who was absent last year attending Wellesley College, will resume her position as teacher of the intermediate department at the Abbott Village school.Miss Martha Manning will teach in the Holt District school in place of Carrie T.
Manning, resigned.The committee have under consideration plans for improving the ventilation in the old Grammar building. Inspector of public buildings Cheney of Boston was in town this week looking over the schools.Prof. Edward G. Coy, instructor in Greek at Phillips, has been tendered the Principalship of Phillips Academy at Exeter. It would be with the deepest regret that his friends and fellow-instructors would hear of his departure, but we can announce with the best of authority that no decision has as yet been reached by Prof. Coy.The Trustees of the "Hill" have leased of Wm. S. Jenkins the house on the corner of Morton and Bartlett Streets. It will be used as a boarding house for the Seminary students and will be conducted by Mrs. L. A.
Johnson who now lives there. C. B. Mason, the Hill carpenter, is putting on an addition to enlarge the dining room.Dea. Henry Griffin, who died at Worcester yesterday at the age of 79, was a native of this town. While a resident of the above city he filled the office of City Auditor for 17 years and held various positions of trust.At the 21st annual reunion of the First Mass. Heavy Artillery held at Salem Willows yesterday E. K. Jenkins of this town was elected one of the executive committee for the ensuing year.There was considerable excitement at the depot last Saturday morning, just before the arrival of the 8.06 train for Boston, caused by the blasting of a rock for an electric light pole on the upper side of the station. It seems that the man in charge of the blasting used a dynamite cartridge two or three times as large as necessary, and the result was quite an upheaval. Wooden sleepers had been placed over the hole, one of which was entirely shattered and the pieces thrown in every direction, accompanied by large fragments of the rock, which went in the direction of the north end of the depot. The force was such that pieces of the rock went through the slate roof of the depot, making two quite large holes and landing on the platform beneath. Other pieces fell in various places around the depot. It was indeed a fortunate thing that no one was injured. A milkman who was standing on the platform had a very close call, one piece falling just beside him. Several others were also in dangerous proximity to the falling fragments. A few minutes later and a train would have come in, when the damage might have been far greater.The Farmer's Club has decided to hold its annual excursion, Thursday, Aug. 22 at the Salem Willows. The fare including railroad trip, transfer on horse cars and steamboat ride up the north shore will be $1.00 for adults and 60 cents for children. Those who do not desire the ride on the boat can have a rebate of 15 cents. The various amusements on the grounds will be free and the proprietor says that he will allow no party to go away dissatisfied, so that there is no doubt but that a pleasant time may be expected. The farmer's excursions have always been thoroughly enjoyable and unusually social occasions, and it is hoped that more than ever will avail themselves of this grand opportunity for a day's outing. First-class dinners can be obtained on the grounds for 50 cents, by those who do not wish to carry baskets. The train will leave Andover at 8, returning at 5.30.

The West church Sunday school were favored with a fine day for their picnic at Bailey's Grove last Friday, and coming after so much rain it seems as if it cleared up for their special benefit. Over two hundred and fifty persons were there, and between consultation of the good things for dinner the day passed pleasantly for all present.Funeral services over the remains of the up in the centre of the village is getting some severe criticism on account of its position.For the benefit of those who wish to attend the Andover Brass Band excursion to-

Road Commissioner Adams has been thoroughly renovating a stone culvert in the Kimball District near the residence of Mr. Orrin Foster. It was originally built about 50 years ago, and has since served to afford a passage for the waters of the tortuous brook which at length finds its way to the Ipswich River. While at work last week at this place hoisting one of the covering stones weighing about 2 tons the support holding the guy ropes gave way, and the derrick fell to the ground breaking the mast. Two boys, Bert Leavitt and Horace Barker, found the door of Mr. Geo. F. Leavitt's house at Brown's Court ajar, Monday evening, also a square of glass broken from the window at the rear of the dwelling. Chief of Police Rextrow, at the suggestion of the boys, looked over the premises, and found that the door had yielded to pressure and the bolt had torn the socket from the door frame. So far as could be learned nothing was missing, although that cannot be definitely stated until the return of Mr. Leavitt from his visit in Maine. It is the opinion of the Chief that it is either the mischievous trick of some youth or some tramp has tried to find a lodging.

Mr. Charles Wadlin, who was pitching for the Salons, in a game of base-ball between the Salons of Salem, N. Tuesday evening at the meeting of the N. A. Grange, was observed as Young People's Night, and although many of the older people were present, yet all proved young enough to enter into the spirit of the occasion heartily, and enjoying very much the evening's diversion. The entertainment presented consisted of an amusing farce entitled "That Boy Tom," a pantomime, "The Bachelor who lived by himself." Another feature that caused exceeding merriment was the instruction of gentlemen in the art of plying the needle. A number of aprons were distributed among the men to be hemmed. On each apron was a number, and the lady who held the corresponding number was supposed to teach the gentleman how to perform the required work. A prize was awarded to the one who did the most skilful work, and another to him whose work would not stand inspection. Mr. Thaddeus Foster of Methuen secured the first prize; Mr. Joseph H. Blunt the second, and Master George Fuller was given the "booby" prize. The aprons were then sold at auction. The Master of the National Grange will visit New England, shortly. It is expected the meeting in Essex County will be held in Amesbury.

The number of drowning accidents, which occur every day, should be a warning to all. No less than twelve were reported in Monday's papers as occurring on Sunday, right here in New England.

SELECTIONS.

Essex County Birds.

"Ancient," the correspondent of the Salem Gazette who has such an observant eye (and ear) out for common things, and has such a happy way of talking about them, writes a very pleasant article on birds, from which we quote:

The Maryland yellow-throat, after the gold-finch and the yellow warbler, may perhaps be called a yellow bird, though by no means so yellow as the two others.
His song has been put into various words; but translating bird songs into words is in most cases much like seeing whales and camels in the clouds. "What a pity, what a pity, what a pity," comes pretty near it. I hear one every day as I sit in the back porch.

Perhaps those readers who have been interested in my allusions to birds will be glad to know how many different species I have observed this season. I have made no excursions into field or wood to speak of. The birds listed have all, as it were, come to me. Those marked with a star I have heard only—the others I have both seen and heard.

|-------------------------|----------------------|
| *Woodthrush, | Song sparrow, | | *Wilson's Thrush, | Chipping sparrow, | | *Robin, | *Field sparrow, | | *Catbird, | Chewink, |
| Brown thrush, | Indigo bird, | | Bluebird, | English sparrow, | | Chickadee, | Bobolink, |
| *Ovenbird, | Redwinged blackbird, |
| *Maryland yellowthroat, | Baltimore oriole, |
| Yellow warbler, | Crow, | | *Black-throated green | *Blue jay, | | warbler, (?) | King bird, | | Redstart, | Phoebe bird, | | Barn swallow, | *Wood pewee, |
| White bellied swallow, | Least flycatcher, | | Black martin (?) | Night hawk, |
| Yellow-throated vireo, | Chimney swift, | | *Red eyed vireo, | Black billed cuckoo, | | *Warbling vireo, | *Golden winged wood- | | Crimson finch, | pecker, |
| Goldfinch, | Downy woodpecker, | | Vesper sparrow, | *Quail. |

Of these 42 species I have observed all but four—the catbird, redstart, redwinged blackbird, and downy woodpecker—from the house where I live. About two I am not positive, though one of them is a very common bird, the black throated green warbler and the martin. A whippoorwill has been heard from the house but not by me. I have seen several hawks, but could not determine the species. I give this list merely to show what a great variety of common birds we have, not to prove any energy on my part, for I do not recollect seeing a cat bird this year, which I could not have avoided had I been into the woods.

If I were called upon to pick out the six best songsters, I should choose the woodthrush, for his wonderfully sweet-toned, leisurely song; the Wilson's thrush, or "yeery," for the mysterious echoing, ranging character of his very peculiar notes; the warbling vireo, for his rich, liquid warble; the crimson or "purple" finch, for his loud, long, rapid, vehement song; the song sparrow for his reedy, simple lyric, and the bobolink for his reckless, jolly medley. To make up the dozen I should take the robin, brown thrush, bluebird, red eyed vireo, goldfinch, and vesper sparrow. And now I must add the oriole to make a baker's dozen. (What baker, pray?) And even now I have left out the chipping sparrow and yellow warbler, which makes me feel sorry. So I must stop, or I shall have them all in.

Underground Railroad Travel.

Our village was not on any of the great thoroughfares of the Underground Railway, but on a side track. To speak plainly, it sometimes happened that slaves in Southern ports secreted themselves on vessels bound for Massachusetts harbors, whence they were occasionally conveyed by anti-slavery friends to my aunt, Mrs.
B., in Fall River. She would fit them for a further journey, and a worthy Scotchman of the town, Mr. R. A., would take them concealed in the back part of a carry-all, and drive them across the country in the night to our place. If it seemed best, the house doors were locked while the refugees were sheltered, so that no officers of the law could obtain easy entrance; and much advice was given to the children how they must behave if the constables should come and carry the father and mother off to jail.

After a fugitive had been harbored in our house until it was deemed safe for him to be launched again into the world, my father used to put him on the train and go part way to Worcester with him. There was one conductor on the road who could be trusted with the perilous secret, and the outlaw would be left in his charge, to be started at the junction on the northern train. My parents gave each refugee, as they speeded him away, an addressed envelope, and this posted in the first Canadian town which was reached would come back to tell the friends who waited behind that they need be anxious no longer, for the exile was safe beyond the sad threatening conveyed in those evil days by the waving of the stars and stripes.

One evening there came a ring at our door, and when my father opened it a sudden burst of laughter startled the inmates of the house. The Scotch guide from Fall River stood there with a negro man who had been disguised by my aunt in a bonnet and shawl. The fellow, in spite of his dangerous plight, was so conscious of his ludicrous appearance that he could not contain himself. It was the fugitive who laughed then, but many years later it was the world that laughed at a fugitive of a different hue, who because he had sought to keep other men in slavery was destined to don a woman's clothes and fly before the advancing law.

When the fugitive Slave Law was passed, many colored persons who had escaped from the South long before, and had lived in peaceful security in the North, felt that they were no longer safe within the borders of the United States. These unfortunate creatures huddled together their poor effects and fled to Canada. One such woman had lived for years in Fall River, when it was reported that the constable who arrested Anthony Burns had been seen prowling about the dwellings of the colored people in town. The Abolitionists became alarmed, thinking she was probably the object of his search, and sent her with three of her children to my parents, who kept her several days, till an older son, who had been at work at a distance, could be brought to go with her to Canada. In fear and terror this mother waited with her babies behind the locked doors of our house, and special plans were made to save her youngest child, should the officers get possession of the others.
Finally the unhappy family were started on their journey, and the superintendent of the road going north from Worcester vowed he would put on an extra train to speed them onward, if it were necessary to do so, to secure their escape. The envelope came back at last, with the Canadian postmark, but no other tidings were ever received of these victims whom the United States could then only persecute.

BOOKS AND READING.

There are three articles at least, of special interest in the Atlantic Monthly for August—although each may interest a different class of readers. The background of Roman History, by H. W. P. and L. D., reviews in pretty prose, Virgil's ancient story. Mrs. Lillie B. Chace Wyman (the B. evidently standing for Buffum), under the caption of From Generation to Generation, gives reminiscences of Abolitionists and their experiences which we can scarcely believe could have happened in this century. Paul T. Ladueur describes a Poet of French Canada—Fréchet—pre-facing his criticism with an admirable sketch of that province and people. Other notable articles are The French Alliance and the Conway Cabal by John Fiske, The German Boy at Leisure, and Olive Thorne Miller's "Black-capped" Baltimore. Lowell contributes a poem, How I consulted the Oracle of the Goldfishes, and the book reviews introduce Emerson, Carlyle, and Madame de Staël. [Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston, $4 a year.]

The New Discovery.

You have heard your friends and neighbors talking about it. You may yourself be one of the many who know from personal experience just how good a thing it is. If you have ever tried it, you are one of its staunch friends, because the wonderful thing about it is, that when once given a trial, Dr. King's New Discovery ever after holds a place in the house. If you have never used it and should be afflicted with a cough, cold or any Throat, Lung or Chest trouble, secure a bottle at once and give it a fair trial. It is guaranteed every time, or money refunded. Trial bottles free at any Drugstore.

The South Congregation had two good sermons from Prof. Taylor. In the morning his subject was "Hope" taken from the text Prov. 15: 13. In the evening he spoke on the "Distinctive" national benefits arising from the pilgrim fathers, morality, education, law and freedom. His thought was suggested in Heb. 11: 13.

The Rector is taking a short rest, and the pulpit at Christ Church was filled last Sunday by Rev. W. D. P. Bliss of Grace Church, South Boston.

At the Baptist church the pastor, Mr. Stratton spoke from the text, Luke 7: 48. "Thy sins are forgiven." The evening service was occupied with the monthly missionary concert.

Rev. Mr. Wilson at the Free church found an appropriate subject in the text, Heb. 11:2—on "Faith," speaking of some of the characteristics of the early Pilgrims' faith, their loyalty to God, church, government and families being examples for us to follow. His evening thoughts were taken from Ex. 17:15.

Rev. J. J. Ryan at the Catholic church made the following his morning text. "Make to yourselves friends of the mammon of iniquity, that where you shall fail they may receive you into everlasting dwellings"—Luke 21: 9.

"What has and is being done by Missions?" was the subject of Rev. Mr. Greene's discourse at the West church, the text being taken from Isaiah 11: 12. The monthly missionary concert was held in the evening. Mr. Green also spoke in the Abbott District in the evening.

Prof. Ryder occupied the Chapel pulpit, preaching on "Brotherly Love" found in the text Heb. 13:1.

The will of the late Sarah Merrill of Methuen bequeathes all of her property, save $4500 given in private bequests, to the First Parish church in Methuen.

The Congregational church at Hinsdale, N. H., has extended a call to Rev. Mr. Stebbins of Athol, Mass.

Mr. Stebbins was a graduate of the Theological Seminary in this town.

Prof. J. W. Churchill preached at Manchester, N. H., last Sabbath.

Prof. W. J. Tucker will occupy the pulpit of the South church in Salem, Aug. 11 and 25.

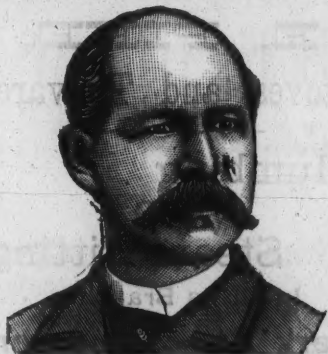

CHRISTIANITY AND THEOLOGY. Say what men will in the depreciation of theology, every man has a theology, and from the nature of the case must have one. The only question is whether his theology shall be right or wrong, systematic or fragmentary, intelligently thought out or reached by haphazard processes. His theology may have the rickets and so deform all his life, or it may be firm and well proportioned, and give symmetry to his character. To depreciate its value is merely to invite disaster by encouraging superficial ways of thinking, which in turn beget lax notions as to morals, and thus weaken the fibre of character. He who sneers at theology sneers at Christianity; the two stand or fall together.—The Examiner.

The Andover savings bank filed a petition Wednesday in the Suffolk court of insolvency against J. M. Glidden of Glidden & Curtis and president of the Pacific Guano Co. The ground for the petition is an unpaid note for $25,000, payable twelve months after date, and due June 6, 1889, on which J. W. Smith appears as principal and J. M. Glidden and G. W. W. Dove as sureties.

Saturday morning the cellar of the house of Charles Abbott in Scotland District was broken into and a quantity of cider and pork taken. It seems that two young fellows rather the worse for a night's outing were seen about 6.30 with a team, stopping at Abbott's. Afterwards they went to B. F. Holt's and fed their horse. They then hitched up and drove away, and soon went to Abbott's again, when finding Mrs. Abbott away and Mr. Abbott in a field out of sight, they gained entrance to the cellar through the bulkhead. A small dish tub there was used as a receptacle for the cider, which was left running after the tub was filled. Some pork was also taken from a barrel. A tramp on his way to Haverhill was taken into their confidence and the trio proceeded to fill themselves with cider.

When it was found out what had been done at the house, Chief of Police Cheever was notified and he immediately started to hunt the offenders up. After looking around awhile and from various facts obtained, he concluded they were from Ballardvale. Before going there, however, the tramp, who had been left to go on his journey, was seen, taken in, and brought to the police station. Chief Cheever then went to the Vale, and found that a team answering to the description of the one seen had been hired the night before from a stable there, and had just been returned by two young men named John Saddler and Timothy Haggerty. Saddler was arrested, and Haggerty, who could not be found was ordered to appear in court Saturday afternoon. Saddler was found guilty, and given a fine with $5 and costs amounting to $16.77 by Judge Poor. Rogers, the tramp, was released. Haggerty failed to appear, but came around Monday and settled for $10 and costs. The charge was larceny of cider.
